Funeral Of Judge Carson.

THE HERALD is unable to give as full report of the burial services of Judge Carson as the editor would like to do, owing to our inability to be present during any part of the exercises. However, we hope to publish something more within a few days, also to give space to a suitable biographical sketch of our honored and deceased citizen.

Rev. Beaman of the Episcopal church read a short burial service at the residence and also at the tomb. The rites were simple and plain in every particular, as the deceased wished, and Mrs. Carson directed. No elaborate display; no ostentation; no bands of music; no flags trailing; no splendid cortege; nothing of pomp, nor glory nor hysterical demonstration. But simply, quietly, lovingly, as the tender and gentle spirit had lived and loved and associated with his fellows, were his mortal remains consigned to the sacredness of the tomb.

Thomas Carson was an unique character. He was a man of whom it could truly be said as of any man: "In him was a big heart."

Whether all is well with him in that mystic sphere to which his spirit hath gone we know not. But this we do know, that while in this world Thomas Carson never lacked a friend nor fared ill because of a perverted nature. Whether in those far realms to which his spirit sailed in its strange journey the craft that bore him thence wrecked on the cold, grey stones projecting from Olvidion's boundless sea, or that today he dwells on the banks of a real river of Life and "rests under the trees" with the spirits of the truly great, who through all past ages have crossed the boundary of the finite and the infinite, we know not. It is not given to mortal mind to perceive the truths of immortality. Hope is the only anchor of the bereft and desolate. And when a good man, a man like Thomas Carson, dies, those who knew and loved him have every assurance on which to base their hope that with him eternal peace and happiness abound. That from the battlements of that bourne where rests his soul today, and from which no traveler ever has come, the kindred spirit can catch the joyous acclaim of him: "All is well! All is well!"

The pall bearers were as follows: Honorary: James B. Wells, James A. Browne, E. H. Goodrich, E. C. Porto, Robert Stillman, A. Thornham (acting for Wm. Kelly.) Active: Benjamin Kowalski, Joseph Webb, Augustin Celaya, B. L. Cain, Oscar Sauder, Adolph Ashheim.

The remains of Judge Carson were placed temporarily in a vault in the Brownsville cemetery. Later they will be removed to Mobile, Ala., where they will be permanently entombed.

THE PRICE MEN PAY.

On the thing we have, and the thing we do, and the thing that we win in the fray, There is always a price Dame Nature sets, and the price we are bound to pay.

We may flatter ourselves in our infantile way that we're playing a confidence game, And that in the end by cunning and stealth we'll hookwink the dear old dame.

But ever and ever she sets it down, the price of each thing that we win.

And if it be won in the way of right or the red, red path of sin; And ever and ever, or sooner or late, though we juggle accounts by the way,

The price that is set in Nature's book is the price that we have to pay.

'Tis the price we have to pay, Tho' the fact may bring dismay, The price that is set in Nature's book is the price that we all must pay.

The primrose path is a jolly path, but the price of its joy is writ, And we cannot escape the grisly shape that ever is haunting it. The wine's red glow is a goodly glow when it moveth itself aright, And we say, "Aha! Let the good wine flow, for this is an unco night."

And we think we are worth a million or two, though the rent hath not been paid;

And we roll 'em high, and the drinks we buy till ghost of trouble is laid;

Till the ghost of trouble is laid, dear boy—but, oh, for the head next day!

The price that is set in Nature's book is the price that we have to pay.

The price that is set in Nature's book is the price that we have to pay.

A REMARKABLE CURE.
We have a remarkable statement which we would like to make to you. There is a young lady in our community whose menstrual period had stopped and whom the doctors said was blindfolded. One day her father came into our store and we advised him to try G. F. P. Gerstle's Female Panacea. He said he did not have the money, and we told him that he could take it and if it did her any good he could pay for it. He did so, and one dose gave relief, while one bottle entirely cured her sound and well. She had been having fits and the doctors had given her up to die.
